Mammalian arginine deiminase (ADI) exists in two isoforms, ADI and ARG1, which are both cytosolic enzymes. ADI catalyzes the conversion of arginine to citrulline while ARG1 is a proline iminopeptidase that was originally characterized as an enzyme implicated in cell division. Here, we show that ARG1 is also able to catalyze the conversion of arginine to ornithine. We also found that ADI is able to convert citrulline to urea and ornithine to proline. Surprisingly, the catalytic efficiency of ADI to convert arginine to urea is close to that of ARG1. Our data provide an explanation for the reduced expression of ADI in cancer cells, in which the high demand for the metabolite urea prevents cells from expressing high levels of ADI.Acute-onset severe renal dysfunction in a patient with immune thrombocytopenia. Immune thrombocytopenia (ITP) is an immune-mediated disorder characterized by autoimmune thrombocytopenia and variable degrees of hemolytic anemia. The disease is divided into three stages: acute, acute-on-chronic and chronic. Renal dysfunction (RD) is a common and serious complication in patients with ITP. Here we report a case of a 54-year-old man with acute-onset severe renal dysfunction as a complication of ITP. Our case is unusual due to its severity and duration. The renal biopsy specimen showed extensive mesangial cell proliferation and crescent formation. It also showed extensive fibrinoid necrosis of glomeruli. Pathologic diagnosis was immune-complex glomerulonephritis. This case suggests that in patients with ITP with severe renal dysfunction, renal biopsy is needed for the early diagnosis of immune-complex glomerulonephritis.Q: How to send binary files in HTTP response I am using File.Exists(path) to determine whether the user uploaded an
