KEYMACRO is a keylogger and allows you to view live or recorded data in the form of a timestamp-based log of your keystrokes. KEYMACRO is intended to be used by web developers and testers in order to see what keystrokes are being performed when they are testing their websites. KEYMACRO allows you to record all keystrokes from any application on your computer, saving them into a log file that can be uploaded to a database and shared with other KEYMACRO users. KEYMACRO can record mouse movements and screen shots. KEYMACRO has two modes, recording keystrokes or recording screen shots. KEYMACRO has three levels of precision: 1-Key, 2-Key and 3-Key. In the recording mode of KEYMACRO, you can choose between a timestamp-based log or an event-based log of keystrokes. When recording is complete, you can export the log into an HTML file for viewing with a web browser. Keyboard input is recorded in keystrokes. These keystrokes are displayed in time order. The function of KEYMACRO is very simple. You have a way to see what was typed in real time. These keystrokes include: Windows key: Windows key shortcut. These keystrokes are recorded by pressing the Windows key and then an additional letter or number on the keyboard. If you press the Windows key and then an asterisk, you record keystrokes corresponding to mouse clicks. Alt+Tab: Used to switch from one application to another. Keystrokes are recorded when you press the Windows key and then the Alt key and then the Tab key. Ctrl+Tab: Used to switch from one application to another. Keystrokes are recorded when you press the Windows key and then the Ctrl key and then the Tab key. Backspace: Used to delete characters from the cursor position. Keystrokes are recorded when you press the Windows key and then the Backspace key. Arrow keys: Used to move the cursor to a new position on the screen. Keystrokes are recorded when you press the Windows key and then the arrow key. F1 to F12: Used to access shortcuts. DOWNLOAD LINKS There are links to further apps here: Details Description Backing up the contacts on your smartphone is common sense to make sure you can easily recover information if your device gets stolen or your OS has to be reinstalled by force. Luckily, Android, iOS and other operating systems offer automatic backup services by logging in with an account via email. However, if you want to be certain that you can always reach your contacts and not depend on an OS service or even your smartphone, you can take the old-school method of putting together a contact book yourself (just not on physical paper). Create a simple phone book to organize your contacts Simple Phone Book Portable is a tool addressing this category of users, who aren't interested in overly complicated phone book software. Wrapped in a simple interface, it can create a standard database (phone book) of an unlimited number of entries (contacts), each accompanied by any number of custom fields (such as email addresses, birth dates, home and work numbers). As the name suggests, installation is not necessary, which means you can keep Simple Phone Book Portable stored on your USB flash drive and keep it close whenever you're on the move. Add an unlimited number of contacts and custom fields The app window has two main areas for creating and managing contacts and groups, along with contacts, respectively. When adding a new contact to the list, you can set a first and last name, email address, home and work phone number, and website. These are the predefined fields provided by the tool but more can be added with any information. Furthermore, you can create groups to organize contacts by type, such as friends, family or co-workers. Options are also available for marking favorite contacts, as well as for exporting the whole list to file and importing later to pick up where you left off or to share your contacts with someone else using Simple Phone Book. Manage contacts in groups and share info with someone else You can quickly locate contacts by name or field with the aid of a finder, change the text color of each field, make the main window stay on top of other applications, change the default fields displayed when adding new contacts, as well as ask the tool to
