What's New in the Bird Chat Combo?

Bird Chat is a suite of applications providing Collaborative Instant Messaging and Chatting Bugs Fixed : MEMORY: On clients the cMemory.exe (task manager) reports the lack of memory when Bird Chat is trying to handle more users than the physical RAM available to the system. On server side, the memory used is not equal than the machine configuration to handle more users than the physical RAM available to the system. (after windows repairs). (Bugfix #103844) MLP2X: BirdChat's MLP2X module requires that its library be installed in a specific place, as it expects that the directory where it is installed to be called "MLP2X" and not "mlp2x". The script files of MLP2X still run into the same error, causing that the server can not initialize. The solution to that error was to create a directory under "appl" and configure the service for that directory as the installation directory. (Fix by Oliver Baly) SERVER: On clients, the user is not able to use the mouse pad to change the chat status. (Fix by Kris) SYSTEM: System can't find "NIVOISERVER\500" Installing the server can result in an "Installation failed" on NIVOISERVER\500 (5005), but you can stop the installation at any time. (Update by Olivier Berge) CLIENT: The "Text" property is not taken into account in some instances in the property grid, and the property is not saved (and applied). (Fix by Olivier) XML: BirdChat can't read an XML file if the second layer of indentation is greater than 3. (Fix by Olivier) COMPILE: EXE file created with a different architecture than the original one fails to run correctly (issue 899). (Fix by Olivier) COMPILE: The "MakeSelf" executable is not named core. (Fix by Olivier) COMPILE: INI file with line breaks and new lines is not read correctly (issue 1015) (Fix by Olivier) CLI: The command line options "-c " has to be prefixed with the string "AB" (Issue by Olivier) CLI: The login class can call a method of a base
