1. Press the S key to display the Photoshop Layers panel. Figure 1-5B shows the Layers panel, which lists the files in a project. 2. To add a new layer, click to select the layer below in the Layers panel. The new layer appears highlighted. 3. Click the New Layer button to insert a new layer, as shown on the left in Figure 1-5C. If you've already created a new layer and want to create a new layer over that, click the New Layer button with the Layers panel active to insert a new layer between the existing layers. A menu appears that allows you to delete the layers below that layer, as shown on the right in Figure 1-5C. 4. Click and drag the marquee around the box shown in Figure 1-5D. The box moves around as you drag. When you're done, click outside of the box or press the Esc key to deselect it. 5. If you want to make the new layer fill the selected portion of the image, choose either Select ⇒ Color Range or Select ⇒ Eyedropper from the Layers panel menu, as shown in Figure 1-5E. Figure 1-5: Click the New Layer button with the Layers panel active to add a new layer. If you prefer to create a selection and paint a new layer over that selection, you need to convert the selection to a selection. 6. To convert the selection, click the icon at the right end of the Layers panel menu, as shown on the left in Figure 1-5F. The Layers panel converts the selection to a selection. If you don't see the icon, use the keyboard to select Convert Selection to from the Layers panel menu and then press Enter. 7. Click the New Layer button to insert a new layer below the converted layer. 8. To fill the new layer, choose Select ⇒ Color Range or Select ⇒ Eyedropper and paint over the converted layer. FIGURE 1-5: To quickly add a new layer over an existing one, click the New Layer button. #

[Formation of neurones in the mouse embryo hemopoietic system during the development of the hematopoietic microenvironment]. Hemopoietic precursors are induced to proliferate in the bone marrow in response to growth factors produced by bone marrow cells, which are called hemopoietic microenvironment. The formation of hemopoietic microenvironment is a complex process which includes formation of the bone marrow, the sinusoid network and the lymphoid tissues. The role of the endothelial cells in this process is still unclear. We have studied the expression of the beta 1 integrins alpha 3 beta 1 (ICAM-1) and alpha 4 beta 1 (Mac-1) on cells of the hemopoietic microenvironment in the mouse embryo. The following observations were made: (a) endothelial cells express alpha 4 beta 1 as well as alpha 3 beta 1, they are both induced by growth factors (b) endothelial cells of sinusoids and metarterioles express alpha 4 beta 1 and not alpha 3 beta 1, which is induced by growth factors (c) endothelial cells of lymph node sinusoids and metarterioles express both integrins and are induced by growth factors (d) macrophages, which are in contact with endothelial cells, express alpha 4 beta 1 and not alpha 3 beta 1 and can be induced by growth factors. In our games, we want the computer to play like the human player, so we try to create a player that can actually act like the human player. That is done by using the full, unaltered game state — the game rules and environment state. The player is not simply a specification of moves that could be made, but rather moves that are made, and consequences of the moves. But since computers play so fast, they don't always play in the exact same way as humans do. To allow computer players to actually feel like a human, we want to make the computer act the same way the human would act. This is done by using a Human-Computer Interaction (HCI) technique called "scaffolding" [Jackson et al., 2009]. Scaffolding is like thinking of the player interface as a scaffold. When building a structure, often we need a scaffold in the first place to get the structure to start. Once the structure is complete, we remove the scaffold. For the

Q: phpAdmin automatically turn off mysqlpdb I have a Linux server, and I installed phpAdmin to it. It works fine, but every time I go there, the mysqlpdb is automatically turned off. So after some time, I can't access it. Someone knows how to access it automatically when I started phpAdmin? A: As @funkyist mentions, the mysqlpdb option is intended for development purposes only. However, you can create a phpMyAdmin user and grant appropriate privileges. This will allow you to connect via PHP, but the mysql user won't be accessible by direct web request. 02-06-2013 As Road Racing fans, we cannot get over the excitement of the 2013 Superbike World Championship. With the new season being ready to commence, there is a lot of training going on, riders getting ready for round 1 in Qatar, and this early in the season the question arises, who will start on the front row at Qatar. With Sunday's French GP out of the way, we are prepared to take a closer look at the battle for the front row in the opening round of the World Championship at Qatar. In my eyes, I think Jordi Torres will start from pole. After all, he was the man on the moon in the last round in Le Mans, pushing his RC212V to a ridiculous 1:03.705 while the riders behind him were trying to keep up with the pace. This, to me, is what racing is about. Every race of the MotoGP World Championship is going to be like this. Each round is going to be special, this first one in the Middle East is going to be special, and that means we'll be seeing Jordi Torres leading the first part of the race. - In the last round you spent most of the race pushing your motorcycle. Do you plan on doing the same at the first race in Qatar? - With a 1:03 I think we'll be able to do the same thing. We are going to start with the pace, and everyone else is going to have to follow. I'm sure we will see a lot of different things throughout the race, but it starts with the first laps. You cannot change that, and you cannot change how the race pans out, you can only try to be at your best. - Last round you overtook
