General Gameplay Information: Dead Gameplay: 3 Turn Win: The player who scores more victories than the other players in the final three turns wins the game. Double Elimination: 2 losses are enough to lose a game. Early Attack: If the team scores during the first two turns, they will score the game. Weakest Player Dies: A list of the weakest players is used, and the player with the lowest strength before the game starts is dead. Closed Cup List: The Nurgle team is a closed list team. Players must be ranked at the top of their respective divisions in order to play on the Nurgle team. Setting Up a Nurgle Team: The Nurgle team, besides having a decent amount of movement, has very little health and toughness to make them an effective team. The biggest strength of the Nurgle teams is their physical strength. Nurgle Warriors have 20 strength, and are the largest and strongest element of a Nurgle team. The Nurgle Warriors are used as ball bearers, and, given their low agility, are usually not used on pitch. Warriors are used mostly on patrol so that the team can impose a 24" range on their Rotters. Difficulty Setting the Nurgle Team: There are a few factors that determine how difficult it is to set the Nurgle team. The first is how many units are willing to play on the Nurgle team. The second is how good a player you are. The third is, of course, how hard you play. Good players can make it work regardless of the number of players. However, if the team is set up poorly, you'll find it very hard to get people to play. The Nurgle team, like most Chaos teams, requires a good player to achieve maximum effectiveness. Anything less, and it may feel as if your team is... well... like Nurgle (meaning it will be slow and boring, with lots of rotters and little offensive power). Challenges of the Nurgle Team: The player who plays on a Nurgle team has to be quite dedicated. This is one of the hardest team to set-up, mainly because the teams are often not used to Chaos teams. The good news is that the Nurgle team, if properly set up and supported, can do well. Nurgle Warriors: The Nurgle Warriors are the most difficult element

This is part of a series that is meant to help new game developers learn new skills. It is designed to build a portable robot that can pick up items, find its drop point and navigate. This first game gives you experience in the full process of writing your own game, from concept to the end user. So what is it about? Well, its about using a robot! This is a very, very basic version of the robot. You can use the screen to look for lasers, jump over gaps, or even use your speed boost to get to things. There are also switches and things that will activate when you hit them. There are also a bunch of things that will take your life, but you don't have to worry about that. You'll learn how to destroy things as you go. There are 60 levels in the game, and all levels must be finished in order to move to the next one. This means that there is no room for loading new data. You will progress to the next level by solving the current one. So you can't try to skip levels. Instead, you will jump right in when you start up the game. At the very end of each level, you will get a star. This is your score. You will keep increasing it with each level you clear. Getting the stars is not mandatory, but it will definitely make it easier. The main goal of the game is to get to the final level, where you will need to get the crate to the end. This means finding all the pieces, defeating the robot in the room with the crate and getting to the drop point. Getting there is not the end goal, though. You need to get to the crate for that! What can I do? You can move the camera with your right and left buttons. You can move your robot by holding your left button down and moving the stick in the direction you want to go. You can try jumping by holding the jump button and then moving left or right. You can use your speed boost by holding down the jump button and pressing the button in the direction you want to go. You can slow yourself down by hitting the button the other direction. You can destroy things with your pickaxe by holding that button down and moving the stick toward them. You can destroy things with the other items by holding the button for the item you want to use and then moving the stick toward them. If you get hit by something, you will lose one life. ## What's new:

- Behind The scenes Legend has it that in 1992 a section of the town walls in Rhaetian Switzerland exploded. The incident, known as the Rhaetian explosion or the Ceneri incident is the reason why Switzerland's Ceneri nuclear power plant never opened. In this Article we'll be taking a trip into the Ceneri's trenches. Welcome to The Breach. The room is quiet. The only sounds are the gentle tick-tick of the clock and the low rumble of the power plant below. It's almost midnight. The security technician left twenty minutes ago, telling us we should be fine. There is a scent of antiseptic in the air. My back aches. The clock on the desk shows 11:55pm. The blinking red LED on the control screen next to the clock says that, yes, we've just over seven minutes to go. In the security cabin, my colleague Claire stands against the wall. She is a quiet young woman with a pale face. Her cheeks and neck are a sickly shade of green. "We're fine," she says, trying to put on a brave face. "He didn't expect us for at least another five minutes." "Your heart rate's high. Are you okay?" She looks up at the ceiling, still trying to read the reads glowing on the control panel. The lights in the room are dim. I feel as though I'm standing in the bowels of a city after a catastrophe. In the truck a man and a woman are chatting quietly on the radio. The man is reading a paper and smoking a cigarette. The woman fidgets with the window blind, showing off the scene outside. She is attractive. She has striking grey eyes and an aristocratic face. The blonde-haired man behind the desk smiles at Claire. "I'm fine," she says. "I'm used to taking late shifts." The man points at the newscast on the radio. "I couldn't turn it off once they told us what happened," the blonde man says, lighting up. I say nothing. The clock on the wall blinks past 11:59pm. The countdown continues.
