: Wildly different take on the Super Bowl Tuesday's Super Bowl marked one of the wildest years in sports, with an epic power outage after the coaches stood by and the Philadelphia Eagles and New England Patriots engaged in one of the NFL's most entertaining championship dramas. But before you know it, the action is back to business as usual for New Hampshire's law enforcement, health, municipalities, schools and roadways, with almost three months until the next Super Bowl, March 1, 2019, in Minneapolis. Welcome to SportsRadio 1310 KFBK's column, Breaking Fast: Wildly different take on the Super Bowl. We'll break down some of the craziest words and actions on Super Sunday from the past year. ***Editors Note: This week's edition of Breaking Fast is exclusively online only: View stories on our New Hampshire Express website: www.newhampshire-express.com/emmys.php MISC. NOTES Stadium Life It was bad enough not being able to watch the game. It was just so sad. Because you guys know I live that dream. I mean I've been to Super Bowls in the past, even though the New England debacle was the NFC Championship Game last year. Because, I mean, I was 2,000 miles away. But I got to go on the ride up, it was glorious. Because this was just-it wasn't working out from an infrastructure standpoint. Fortunately we did have a guy come in who's extremely well loved in the community. He's been around for decades. He's been a terrible driver. For years he's been illegally parking, illegally doing stunt driving, and gunning it down the racetrack, across the way. But somehow he found the time and energy, and he came in and fixed everything. It was fun and there were a lot of amenities. The challenge will be will there be an interesting second half and a decent host and a great ride? That's the part that looks iffy. ***Meanwhile, on the floor at the Concord Chamber of Commerce's Red Bank Grille, team sponsors from logistics and, we later learned, missing teams were ordered to follow their cues, and make their way through the event where the chamber is located. One team, a famous rock band whose representative did not speak during an on-air interview with me, were brought to the stage by their photographer. They were then instructed to

Papers, Please is a wordless drama. As a border inspector in the fictional Republic of Urbzina, your mission is to decide whether or not to let a citizen enter the country. Your job is as simple as it is mind-numbingly mundane: Obey the law, save lives, and don't screw up. STORY: The premise of the game is about an applicant applying to enter the country. He's got the right documents, but the mistakes he makes while filling out his paperwork are noticed by the border guards, who immediately inform the townspeople, who begin protesting. He then walks through the town square while everyone around him tells him what an idiot he is for applying for citizenship. When you get to the town hall, you're given your last chance to back out: The local judge will view the paperwork and decide whether or not the applicant is legally allowed to enter the country, and if he's not, the applicant will be sent home, and your game ends. Key Features: * A 3D wordless wordplay drama in "Papers, Please" - wordless anime video * A heartwarming story of an applicant's bid to enter the country * Unique "wordless anime" graphics set in a detailed, animated world * Play your own role as a border inspector, saving lives and fulfilling your duty as a guard * Interactive characters deliver dialogue based on your decisions * Expertly animated by the same team responsible for the anime series "Duel Masters" * Earn achievements and win rewards to improve your border station * Customise your border station with up to 14 unique customisation options, including a portrait image of your character * 2D and 3D views * Dozens of in-game achievements and leaderboards * Perfect for wordless drama fans * Perfect for wordless wordplay fans * Perfect for wordplay lovers of all genres Features: - Wordless 3D animation that takes your to a new level of scale - Based on the story and characters of the original long-form game - Delivers a moment to moment wordplay experience in a new atmosphere - Images of objects in the surroundings give you dynamic animation throughout the game - An original story that takes you on a story about border and immigration - Beautiful illustrations and animations based on the original game's world and characters - A highly articulated character and animation system - Characters move and react according to the events in the game
