The garage and the house lights come on, but the lights in the house seem to be working just fine. The lawn lights (all of them) are fine as well. The extension cords will still light up but nothing to be read on the bulbs. Anyone have any ideas?? Mike Today's The-World-Says: 1. Is this house on a power line? 2. Is this an "upstairs-downstairs" issue and you are talking about the controls in the basement? I would be thinking that there is an issue with a branch circuit. I have seen a lot of electrical problems with extension cords and some of the other cables that go in and through the walls. Most of them are very simple to resolve. Today's The-World-Says: I would think that the main control panel is on a different circuit, but as you say, it could be from a power supply issue. If you are sure that it's not a problem with the lights themselves, just a control problem with the main switch, you could have a blown fuse, open circuit, open breaker, or a blown switch. There are a lot of different things that could be going on. Most typically, it is a fault in the circuit that is protected by the fuses. These fuses are on their own circuit and their purpose is to protect the circuit from a fault or overload. You'd likely find these out by trying to operate the lights without power at the fuse panel. If you start having lights turn on when you don't expect them to, and you have no power at the fuse panel, then the circuit breaker or fuse

Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an image pickup apparatus. 2. Description of the Related Art A conventional image pickup apparatus, such as a digital camera and a camcorder, is configured to be operated in two modes to display a different operation screen in accordance with a kind of operation a user executes. For example, a mode to display an operation screen for selecting an image to be recorded is called a "replay mode", and a mode to display an operation screen for indicating a recording start and end points is called a "playback mode". Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open No. 2007-253542 discloses a technique of arranging a plurality of operation screens with respect to image pickup operation in a case where two operation screens are displayed.Q: Ruby's method implementation I am learning to use an object oriented programming language for the first time and I am having trouble figuring out what to do in the following code snippet class Foo attr_reader :y def initialize x @x = x @y = :test end def y @y end end p Foo.new(1) # => Foo object p Foo.y # => :test This seems backwards and I am not sure how to access y? A: I guess, you might be confused, what a method is. In ruby, methods are bound to a single class and can be called by a class method or a instance method. Class methods: For example, when you call Foo.method_name it will be bound to
