Recent work from cell-level structure to human visual functioning and perception is used to propose a novel approach to human vision. It is argued that evolution has designed the avian visual system for local motion detection in the horizontal plane, but the evolution of human vision has been driven by the need for information processing at a level beyond the detailed local analysis that occurs in the avian retina. The results of this argument are briefly summarized.The Prospect Talent Score (PTS) represents a player's projected contributions in today's game based on their tools and past performance. This system is designed to forecast performance and player value for all minor league batters and pitchers. This tool also projects minor league players' careers for three years and offers an analysis of a player's future contact skills and general potential for growth in each of the scouting tiers. Hitters The top-ranked ranking for overall player potential is generally reserved for elite prospects who are no more than a few months removed from their professional debut. There are six such players in the 2017 MLB draft. Players below the top-10 but above 60 overall rank are designated as Top-100 prospects with a solid chance of being selected in the early rounds. In total, there are seven such players. There are 14 hitters ranked 60-100 who would receive a prospect recommendation but do not have a substantial chance of being selected in the early rounds. Some are still prospects, however, and could rise on draft boards to be selected at later rounds. Tier One: Top-100 Hitters Hit HBP K AB R RBI SB BABIP OBP SLG OPS PRM
