I'm designing a mobile app for a business, which needs to integrate with an online system. I want to have a solid architecture for the app once it's built. The app will: Display online data Accept data from the online system Retrieve online data Perform complex calculations on the data Share the results I'm planning for it to be built using iOS/Android, and I'm leaning towards using Angular for the client-side. I am flexible on my frameworks. I want to know at what stage in the design process I should start developing. The benefit of choosing a framework before I begin building the app is it's easier to build and understand the UI/UX. The benefit of choosing a framework after I begin developing the app is the code is written. Is it best to choose c6a93da74d
